

DeBobes honored by ASSE

Leo J. DeBobes has received the Regional Safety Professional of the Year Award from the American Society of Safety Engineers Region VIII for demonstrating outstanding accomplishments as a safety professional and making significant contributions to advance the safety profession. The region is the organization's largest and encompasses NY, NJ, PA, CT, MA, NH, VT, ME and RI. ASSE is comprised of more than 34,000 safety, health and environmental (SH&E) professionals working to protect people, property and the environment. DeBobes is Assistant Administrator for Emergency Management and Regulatory Compliance at Stony Brook University Hospital, is clinical assistant professor and environmental health concentration advisor at Stony Brook University's School of Health Technology & Management and is associate professor and fire protection technology program coordinator at Suffolk Community College. He served two terms as the ASSE Long Island Chapter president and is a former chief of the Setauket Fire Department, where he is chair of the department's executive board.